

The FCC should not preempt Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in favor of a less effective national standard. Indiana's law is working beautifully. Before Indiana's law, I was receiving five to seven invasive, disruptive, and unnecessary calls daily from telemarketers; after the law's implementation, I now receive none. Our home quality- of -life has been immensely enhanced because of this law. To interfere with a state law, Indiana's Telephone Privacy law(s), would be counterproductive and ludicrously non-logical. Indiana's current Telephone Privacy law is working perfectly. Please leave it alone.

Sincerely,

Barbara T. Boris
